THE CARIBBEAN TRAVEL ASSOCIATION SPONSERS HISTORIC TOURISM EVENT

The Caribbean Travel Association, which represents the governments and tourism industries of some 19 destinations in the region was, this past week, the catalyst behind a series of historic events of touristic importance to the Caribbean.

On Thursday, May 23rd, the C.T.A. sponsored The State Ball of the Governments of the Caribbean at the Plaza Hotel. The ball was a fund raising event to establish a public relations program for the benefit of C.T.A. members, and many Heads of State and Tourism Ministers were present. Among those who attended the ball were the Honorable F. J. Tromp, Governor, and Director of Tourism Mr. O. B. Arends of Aruba; Director of Tourism Basil Atkinson from the Bahamas; the Honorable Peter G. Morgan, Minister of Tourism, and Mr. Livingstone Burrowes, Chairman of the Barbados Board of Tourism; Dr. A. W. Wouters, Secretary of the Executive Committee, and Director of Tourism Senator Ch. L. R. Ellis of Bonaire; His Excellency K. R. Crook, the Governor, and the Honorable Warren W. Conolly, J. P., Minister of Tourism of the Cayman Islands;

the Honorable A. E. Kibbelaar, Governor, and Director of Tourism Mr. Peter van der Veen of Curacao; Chairman of the Tourism Bureau Clarence A. Butler of Dominica; Ambassador Roberto Valentin of the Dominican Republic; Secretary General for Economic Affairs, representing the Prefect, Dr. Bernard Sarazin and Director of Tourism Fortune from Guadaloupe, St. Barthelemy and St. Martin; Ambassador Jean Claude Bordes from Haiti; Secretary General for Economic Affairs Mr. Andre Delahaye and President of the Tourist Board Mr. Jean Baptiste Edmond of Martinique; Minister of Tourism Roberto E. Bouret of Puerto Rico; the Honorable Robert L. Bradshaw, Premier, of St. Kitts, Nevis and Anguilla; Lieutenant Governor A.C. Ottley and Assistant Commissioner Carmen Simmons from the U.S. Virgin Islands and Minister of Tourism Dr. Frank Briceno of Venezuela.

Carlos A. Diago, President of the Caribbean Travel Association, said in his address: "It is C.T.A.'s goal to serve as the catalyst in making the Caribbean the number one tourism destination in the world--not only in terms of visitors and revenues, but in terms of service, accommodations and attractions. For developing a sound tourism infrastructure is the essential first step to a sound tourism economy." Mr. Diago also noted that another important aspect of C.T.A.'s promotional effort is the Caribbean fair which is being organized for the first time this year. This event will bring the islands of the Caribbean together and showcase their commercial and financial appeal in a presentation of considerable impact on the potential investor and potential traveler.

In his address to the assembled dignitaries, His Excellency Robert L. Bradshaw, Premier of St. Kitts, Nevis and Anguilla, who was Honorary Chairman of the ball, said: "Tourism has securely established itself as, perhaps, the first social industry of major importance in the Western world. It is an industry which possesses tremendous power that can be harnessed and channeled to effect economic development, social betterment, and even to change mental attitudes, as well as life-styles, in recipient countries.... tourism is leisure, it is fun, it is relaxation, it is tension-relieving, it is education, it is travel, it is people meeting people. It is pleasant and rewarding personal service. It is, indeed, human understanding...."

On Friday morning, May 24th, the Heads of State and Ministers of Tourism convened at the Plaza for another historic occasion--the first meeting between high level island officials to discuss their common tourism problems, and coordinate efforts to promote tourism as an effective tool for the socio-economic development of the C.T.A. member countries.

Among the various speakers at the conference was Roberto E. Bouret, Executive Director of Puerto Rico's Tourism Development Company. He elaborated on the concept that for an intelligent growth of tourism in the Caribbean to take place, it is necessary to develop cultural nationalism within the framework of economic interdependence. No island or country can operate as an island unto itself in this age, "and strength in a unity of purpose can provide the various destinations of the Caribbean with the resources and influence they lack individually."

Toward this end, Mr. Bouret proposed that an exploration be made of the possibility of marketing, jointly, the small hotel properties in the islands. He also said: "I suggest that the C.T.A. seriously consider the advantages of establishing a regional airline to supplement existing air service within the area. Such service could become an important spur to tourism in the entire region."

Dr. Frank Briceno, Minister of Tourism in Venezuela, announced the joining of C.T.A. by the Government of Venezuela, and expressed interest in cooperating with the people of the Caribbean in tourism promotional plans. In adding Venezuela's backing to the projects being developed by C.T.A., Dr. Briceno mentioned the special fund that the President of Venezuela, Carlos Andres Perez, has announced will be available to help the financing of the economic development of the region.

Following the conference, the Heads of State and other dignitaries traveled to New York's City Hall where Mayor Abraham Beame received them and proclaimed May 24th, 1974 Caribbean Governors Day.
